Academics

- North Carolina State University (NCSU), Raleigh, NC – Graduated May 2019
  - B.S. in Computer Science with Concentration in Engineering Courses
  - Minor in French
- Université Catholique de Lille – Study Abroad Program in France

Brewing Methods

- Hario V60
  - The V60 is what I personally make every day. I found it took a while trying out brewing methods in order to get an even extraction and get all the flavors of the coffee to really pop, but I have refined my brewing process and make a V60 every day, constantly trying out new theories and ideas to improve my extraction.
- Chemex
  - I have some experience brewing with a Chemex, just for fun and variety.
- French Press
  - French Press is a classic. It is the first brewing method I learned and something I still use when I want to economize my beans or make a quick and easy brew with low effort.
- Filter
  - I've made my fair share of filter coffee for my roommates. It's pretty standard, but still takes experimenting with ratios and water.

Favorite Researchers

- Scott Rao
  - In my opinion Scott Rao is on top of the coffee game. From his podcasts, to his Youtube videos, to his tips of the day, Scott Rao is someone I have learned a tremendous amount of brewing and roasting from. Scott is also someone I have had the pleasure of meeting and speaking to in person. Scott's blog can be found here <https://linktr.ee/whereisscottrao>
- Jonathan Gagné
  - Jonathan combines science and coffee to provide a lovely perspective on what we can explore in the world on coffee from a scientific point of view. Jonathan's blog and research can be found here <https://linktr.ee/jgagneastrocoffee>
- Tim Wendelboe
  - Tim has lovely instructional videos, as well as vlogs, stories, and documentations from his trips all around the world exploring the world of coffee. His channel can be found here https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCCyw4GaWJHezSUowFJ\_uH0A
